U.S. AND BRITISH AIMS

ROOSEVELT-CHURCHILL EIGHT-POINT POLICY

THE President of the United States of America and Mr. Winston Churchill, British Premier, have met at sea, and made a declaration of "common principles in the national policies of their respective countries, on which they base their hopes for a better future of the world." The declaration falls into eight sections. It renounces all desire for territorial gain, and affirms the right of peoples to choose their own form of Government.

It expresses the desire to bring about the fullest collaboration between all nations in the economic field, and, since the nations must come to the abandonment of the use of force, the declaration expresses the belief that, pending a wider and permanent system of security, the disarmament of nations which threaten aggression outside their frontiers is essential.

MR. ATTLEE'S STATEMENT

Mr. Attlee in his broadcast said:—I have come to tell you about an important meeting between the President of the United States and the Prime Minister which has taken place, and of a declaration of principles which has been agreed between them. Here is the statement which they have agreed to issue:—

"The President of the United States and the Prime Minister (Mr. Churchill), representing His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom, have met at sea. They have been accompanied by officials of their two Governments, including high-ranking officers of their military, naval and air services.

"The whole problem of supply of munitions of war, as provided by the Lease-and-Lend Act for the armed forces in the United States, and for those countries actively engaged in resisting aggression, has been further examined.

"Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Supply of the British Government, also joined in these conferences. He is going to proceed to Washington to discuss further details with the appropriate officials of the United States Government. These conferences will also cover the supply problem of the Soviet Union.

"The President and the Prime Minister had several conferences. They have considered the dangers to world civilisation arising from the policy of the military domination by conquest upon which the Hitlerite Government of Germany and other Governments associated therewith have embarked, and have made clear the steps which their countries are respectively taking for their safety in facing these dangers.

THE DECLARATION

They have agreed upon the following joint declaration:—

"The President of the United States and the Prime Minister (Mr. Churchill), representing His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom, being met together, deem it right to make known certain common principles in the national policies of their respective countries on which they base their hopes for a better future for the world.

"First—Their countries seek no aggrandisement, territorial or other.

"Second—They desire to see no territorial changes that do not accord with the freely-expressed wishes of the peoples concerned.

"Third—They respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live, and they wish to see sovereign rights and self-government restored to those who have been forcibly deprived of them.

"Fourth—They will endeavour, with due respect for their existing obligations, to further the enjoyment by all States, great or small, victor or vanquished, of access on equal terms to the trade and to the raw materials of the world which are needed for their economic prosperity.

"Fifth—They desire to bring about the fullest collaboration between all nations in the economic field with the object of securing for all improved labour standards, economic advancement and social security.

"Sixth—After the final destruction of Nazi tyranny they hope to see established a peace which will afford to all nations the means of dwelling in safety within their own boundaries, and which will afford assurance that all the men in all the lands may live out their lives in freedom from fear and want.

"Seventh—Such a peace should enable all men to traverse the high seas and ocean without hindrance.

"Eighth—They believe all the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons, must come to the abandonment of the use of force. Since no future peace can be maintained if land, sea or air armaments continue to be employed by nations which threaten, or may threaten, aggression, outside their frontiers, they believe that, pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of genuine security, the disarmament of such nations is essential. They will likewise aid and encourage all other practical measures which will lighten for peace-loving peoples, the crushing burden of armaments."

MR. ROOSEVELT'S INITIATIVE

BEST-KEPT SECRET OF THE WAR

Mr. Attlee, says the Press Association Diplomatic Correspondent, has disclosed at last the best-kept political secret of the war. Even now the full story has not been unfolded. I am, however, able to state that Mr. Churchill set out on this westward quest at the express personal invitation of President Roosevelt, who initiated the conference. That the President and the Premier were together in close consultation for three days, during which, no doubt, they discussed the whole field of the war, and such problems as the Far East danger, joint aid for Russia, and the position of ports like Dakar.

Lord Beaverbrook's presence means that war supplies were much to the fore.

Mr. Attlee's broadcast was authorised by the Premier and the President.

The Press Association understands that Mr. Churchill probably will broadcast on his meeting with the President in due course.

While the President has been cruising, several United States statesmen have left Washington without disclosing their destination. They included Mr. Sumner Welles, Assistant Secretary of State; Admiral Stark, Chief of Naval Operations; General Arnold, Chief of the Air Staff; General George Marshall, Chief of the Army General Staff, and Major James Burns, the right-hand man to Mr. Harry Hopkins. Colonel Knox went to York Harbour, Maine—not far from the Potomac's itinerary.

While on board the Potomac in New England waters the President conferred with Rear-Admiral Ernest King, Commander of the United States Atlantic Fleet.

LORD BEAVERBROOK IN WASHINGTON

Lord Beaverbrook arrived here to-day by bomber. He was accompanied by General Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff. Immediately after landing Lord Beaverbrook drove to the British Embassy, where, it was announced, he would see Press representatives after to-day.—(Reuter.)

HOW AMERICA REGARDS IT

REPRESENTATIVE OF PEOPLE'S VIEWS

PRESS ASSOCIATION FOREIGN SPECIAL.

WASHINGTON, Thursday.

It fell to Mr. Attlee to tell Americans of the Churchill-Roosevelt meeting, and the very important conclusions and agreements they had reached.

The fact that the majority of Americans believed that President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill had been meeting took away no interest from the announcement, which was instantly characterised by some observers as being as near to a joint agreement that America would see the war through with Britain as any leader of democratic America could go without Congress.

That Congress will not fail to back up the President is shown by Senator Connally's statement, in which the head of the powerful Senate Foreign Affairs Committee said that the statement represented the general views of the people of the United States.

MR. CORDELL HULL'S COMMENT

WASHINGTON, Thursday.

Mr. Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, described the Churchill-Roosevelt declaration as "a statement of the basic principles and fundamental ideas of policies that are universal in their practical application. Up to now they have been generally accepted by all civilised nations, and they were being strongly supported until certain countries decided to launch a universal movement to destroy the whole structure of civilised relations between nations, and to establish a system of rule over the peoples who would be conquered based largely on barbarism and savagery. That interruption is still going on."—(Reuter.)

VIEWS OF AXIS COUNTRIES

GERMAN COMMENT

The Berlin Radio, in its overseas transmission in German, was the first of the German broadcasts to comment on the declaration last night, describing it as obviously nothing but a means of helping each other in the embarrassment caused by the present situation. "They want to make the world believe that what they said was something like a peace programme," it continued.

"The statement that they desire to see no territorial changes once more proves their desire for Versailles to be perpetuated."

After construing the statement to mean that "according to the will of Britain and the United States Bolshevism is to become the standard for Europe," the Radio concluded. "But it is the German victories which will give a durable foundation to the future Europe."

The German News Agency said that Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt had agreed on an eighth-point war statement, of which the high light, according to the Agency version, was "disarmament of the Axis Powers."

ROME SUGGESTS WORLD DISTRUST

A despatch issued by the official Italian News Agency makes only an extremely bare reference to the contents of the declaration, and adds: "The least that can be said of the declaration is that it will be received with a legitimate mistrust by the nations of the whole world." City and Wall street bankers, it added, had failed to take into account "the possibility of a victory of the Axis." A Fascist spokesman said that the Anglo-American declaration would fail to turn the Axis or Japan off their course in the war.—(Associated Press.)

NO MENTION OF JAPAN, SAYS TOKYO

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

TOKYO, Thursday.

The Domei Agency says that observers here consider it significant that Japan is apparently not mentioned in connection with the 8-point declaration.

FRANCE DISSATISFIED

VICHY, Thursday.

A highly-placed source here to-day indicated the French Government's reaction by describing it as an "insufficient assurance of peace and justice." He said that the two statesmen had been "simply refurbishing" the Wilson doctrine.

ARGENTINE TO TAKE 20 SHIPS

R.A.F. DAYLIGHT SWEEPS

14 GERMAN FIGHTERS LOST

CONTINUING their sweeps across the Channel yesterday, the Royal Air Force ended daylight operations with a loss of five to fourteen German fighters.

Early in the afternoon Blenheim bombers, escorted by fighters, attacked Boulogne, bombs being seen to burst on the target. One intercepting fighter was destroyed and the British losses were two fighters, says the Press Association. In a further attack by British fighters over the coast of Northern France 13 German fighters were destroyed. Three British fighters are missing.

TRIPOLI STATION DESTROYED

During the same night heavy bombers of the Royal Air Force carried out an attack on military objectives in Tripoli. The railway station was destroyed by our bombs, and a number of fires were started on other targets. Motor transport on the coast road to Benghazi was also machine-gunned.

Yesterday's Royal Air Force Middle East communiqué stated:—

"Royal Air Force bomber aircraft carried out attacks on Bardia during the night of August 12-13. Direct hits were obtained on the Custom House and motor transport workshops. Enemy night fighters were seen, but did not intercept. Bombs were also dropped on Derna.

"Fleet Air Arm aircraft dropped bombs on the aerodromes of Catania and Gervini, and machine-gunned dispersed aircraft. One Cant Z506 was shot down by Hurricanes off Sicily on August 10th.

From all operations our aircraft returned safely."

The land situation in Libya remained unchanged, says the Press Association.

THREE R.A.F. 'PLANES DOWN

The German Radio last night claimed that three British 'planes were brought down during an R.A.F. raid on the Channel coast on Wednesday.—(Associated Press.)

BRITISH AIRMEN PICKED UP AT SEA

Twenty-seven men of the Royal Air Force were picked up by the German sea ambulance service during July, says the German News Agency.—(Reuter.)

Those Delayed Petrol Coupons

When inquiries were made at the Department of Supplies it was stated that motorists were themselves largely to blame for the delay experienced in getting their petrol coupons.

Here are the figures of registration applications as they were received and dealt with by the Department:—510 on August 1st, 2,090 on the 2nd, 1,300 on the 5th, 1,100 on the 6th, 1,500 on the 7th, 660 on the 8th, 546 on the 9th, 890 on the 11th, and 517 on the 12th.

From these figures it is obvious, says the Department, that thousands of motorists could not have got their supplies any earlier, and it was unfair to saddle the Department for something outside their control.

It was learned in Dublin last night that most motorists have now received their August petrol coupons. Motorists who had complained through the Irish Times that holiday arrangements had had to be abandoned because of the delay of the Department of Supplies in issuing August coupons, pointed out that the explanation of the Department was unconvincing. Many motorists had taxed their cars and handed in the requisite documents entitling them to petrol coupons long before August 1st. But they did not receive their coupons. Further, it was stated that applications were not dealt with by the Department in rotation. Most of the coupons were issued fully a fortnight later.

One motorist asked by the Irish Times how he felt about the situation, said indignantly: "Along with 510 others—and I'm quite sure about that figure—I taxed my car on August 1st and handed in my coupon application. It took the authorities fourteen days to work round to my case and by that time my one yearly holiday was ruined!"

It is suggested that the most reasonable course for the Department to follow would be to arrange to hand out coupons along with registration discs.

FURTHER RESULT OF TALKS

HINT OF PLEDGE TO RUSSIA

ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM.

WASHINGTON, Thursday.

A further announcement dealing with Russia may be planned, as a result of the Roosevelt-Churchill talks, it was hinted by Mr. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State. This may concern a possible joint message from the two Democratic leaders to Stalin, containing an assurance that all possible help would be forthcoming to support Russian resistance to Germany. The question of aid to the Soviet is believed to have figured prominently in the talks, with reports from Mr. Harry Hopkins, and the British Military Mission in Moscow supplying full details of Soviet needs.

It was taken for granted in Washington that Tokyo's expansionist policy and France's collaboration were also fully discussed. Whatever the decisions for counter-measures, they remained in the realm of the highest military secrets.

It is now known that Admiral Ernest King, Commander of the United States Atlantic Fleet, met Mr. Roosevelt early last week. The President might then have transferred to the Admiral's Flagship for his voyage far out into the Atlantic.

Mr. Roosevelt is expected back in Washington this week-end.

LONGER SERVICE IN U.S. ARMY

WASHINGTON, Thursday.—The U.S. Senate to-day approved by 35 votes to 19 the bill extending the period of service for military personnel from one year to two-and-a-half years. The bill previously passed by the House of Representatives with a majority of one vote has now to be signed by President Roosevelt.—(Reuter.)

MINISTER RESIGNS

NEW POST FOR MR. RUTTLEDGE

MR. Patrick Ruttledge, T.D., has resigned membership of the Government. Announcing the resignation last night, the Government Information Bureau stated that Mr. Ruttledge has been appointed by the President of the High Court to be General Solicitor for Wards of Court.

Mr. Ruttledge was Minister for Local Government and Public Health since 1939; he was Minister for Lands and Fisheries in Mr. de Valera's first Government, and later Minister for Justice. During Mr. de Valera's imprisonment in the Civil War he was Acting President of the Irish Republic.

As General Solicitor for Wards of Court, Mr. Ruttledge succeeds Mr. James J. Robinson, solicitor, of Messrs. A. and J. Robinson, 119 St. Stephen's Green, Dublin, who died on July 4th last. Although his resignation from the Government will mean his return from the active political sphere to that of the law, he will, of course, retain his seat in the Dail, where he represents North Mayo.

Mr. Ruttledge will represent the legal interests of all lunatics and all wards in Eire, and will be paid according to the legal costs of his activities in each case which arises. His new post is a very valuable one, and the annual remuneration represents more than his ministerial salary.

When the Fianna Fail Party assumed office in 1932 he was chosen as Minister for Lands and Fisheries. When Fianna Fail was returned to office in the second election that year he became Minister for Justice in succession to Mr. James Geoghegan. This office he retained until the reshuffle of September, 1939, when he was transferred to the much-criticised Ministry of Local Government and Public Health.

Outside his political and professional activities Mr. Ruttledge is keenly interested in horse racing, and is the owner of many horses, one of the most successful of which was Mondragon, which won for him the Irish Derby in 1939.

FINDING A SUCCESSOR

FROM OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

The resignation will present Mr. de Valera with something of a problem, as there is admittedly no great wealth of material among the back benchers of his party. It may be that the Taoiseach will seize the opportunity for a further reshuffle of his Cabinet, and that either Mr. Sean MacEntee, the present Minister for Industry and Commerce, or Mr. Gerald Boland, Minister for Justice—who already has acted as Minister for Local Government—may be asked to assume the vacant office. That, of course, would mean finding a new Cabinet Minister, and the odds would seem to be on Mr. Hugo Flinn, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Lands.

In these circumstances, a new Parliamentary Secretary would seem to be needed, and among the rank and file of Fianna Fail the name that first springs to mind is that of Mr. Erskine Childers, who has built up a reputation for his insight into affairs and his keenness. He is one of the few speakers outside front benchers who can secure a House when he speaks. Other names mentioned in the neighbourhood of Leinster House last night were those of Mr. Michael Clery and Mr. P. J. O'Loghlen.

BRITISH SUBMARINE RAMMED, SAYS ROME

The Italian claim to have rammed and sunk the British submarine Cachalot, made in the Rome war communiqué of August 4, is amplified by the log of the Italian torpedo boat Papa, issued in Rome yesterday. It is stated that the action took place in the early hours of the morning, and that the submarine was struck by the torpedo boat behind the conning tower and soon afterwards sank. Ninety-one of the Cachalot's crew were stated to have been rescued. The Italian commander, it is added, made sure all the men in the sea had been picked up.

GALWAY AS LIVE STOCK PORT

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

GALWAY, Thursday.

Galway Corporation to-day decided to send a deputation to Dublin with a view to obtaining for Galway port a share in the live stock export trade.

Alderman Miss Ashe said that according to the Press the export quota had been divided between Dublin and Cork, and she thought Galway, with its up-to-date port, should not be passed over.

It was decided also to ask the T.D.s for the county to accompany the deputation.

The Soviet Government has ordered that immediately after the arrival of the Ambassador in Moscow all Polish citizens—war prisoners, political prisoners and deportees will be released.

LESS TENSION IN FAR EAST

JAPANESE MINISTER WOUNDED

THE Japanese Foreign Minister, Admiral Toyoda, was received in audience by the Emperor yesterday, and observers believed that tension in Japan and the Far East generally had eased somewhat.

THAILAND PLEASED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BANGKOK, Thursday.

The Thai Government is gratified by the British and American attitude to recent events, Bangkok radio said last night. The speaker drew attention to the statements by Mr. Eden and Mr. Cordell Hull as a cause for satisfaction. The British and American Governments, he said, showed a clear understanding of Thailand's policy. The country's understanding with Japan was also good. The statement denied that any negotiations have begun between Thailand and Manchukuo since the recognition of the latter.

VICE-PREMIER SHOT

ASSOCIATED PRESS.

TOKYO, Thursday.

Baron Hiranuma, Japanese Vice-Premier and Minister without Portfolio, was wounded in a pistol attack by an assailant who entered his home at 8 a.m. to-day. The attacker was arrested.

Baron Hiranuma was Minister for Home Affairs in the old Cabinet, and was Premier two years ago. He was shot in the chest and jaw, but the police report describes the wounds as only slight.

The police have identified the attacker, Ishiyama, as being unofficially associated with the Black Dragons—a secret society.

Despite his age (74) and his wounds, Baron Hiranuma pursued his assailant and caught him at the gate, where, with the aid of the gatekeeper, he held him until the arrival of further help.

There was no announcement on the Minister's condition to-night, but there was a hopeful sign when the Emperor sent him a basket of fruit. If the Emperor had sent Imperial wine it would have indicated there was little hope for recovery, says Associated Press.

COUP LIKELY

Commenting on the attempt on the life of Baron Hiranuma, well-informed quarters in Chungking (according to Reuter) express the view that continued indecision of the Japanese Government is likely to result in a political coup in Japan, where the Army group is daily growing impatient of inactivity, Prince Konoye, backed by elder statesmen, is believed to be trying to hold the Army in check, knowing that a major war in the Pacific would destroy the Japanese Empire. There are increasing signs, however, that the Japanese extremists cannot be held in check indefinitely.

In connection with the report that the would-be assassin of Baron Hiranuma is a member of the Nationalistic Black Dragon Society, it may be recalled that Prince Konoye received Mitsuru Toyoma, head of that Society, at a luncheon conference two weeks after the Cabinet reshuffle.

BURMESE PREPARE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

RANGOON, Thursday.

The Burmese people are making preparations to resist any attack on their country. "If the lives and happiness of 16,000,000 people are to be jeopardised by the lust for power we will defend ourselves to the last man, and we are not alone," is the answer of the Burmese to potential threats from abroad. Behind mountains and across rivers Burma's defence forces stand guard. The Empire's resources in 'planes, guns and armoured vehicles have been drawn on to bring them to full strength.

JAPAN AND SOVIET

It is understood in Chinese circles here that four mechanised units of 150 tanks each have been sent to Manchuria from Japan, two of which have already arrived, says Reuter's Chungking correspondent.

NO EXPORTS TO JAPAN

The British Board of Trade have made an order prohibiting as from August 15 all exports to Japan and Japanese territory except under licence from the Board of Trade. All outstanding export licences for these destinations are being revoked.

KEROSENE RATION ORDER

The Minister for Supplies has made an Order providing for the licensing of kerosene retailers and the registration of domestic users of kerosene.

On and from the 25th inst. all retailers of kerosene must be licensed, while from the 1st September next all domestic users of kerosene must be registered with a licensed retailer. Supplies can only be made available for use in premises which are not equipped with gas or electricity, and the maximum amount which may be sold to any occupier of premises is half a gallon per month.

EXTENSIVE DAMAGE IN CORK FIRE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

CORK, Thursday.

Three families, partly dressed, had to be hastily evacuated from their homes when a fire broke out on the premises 15, 16 and 17 Merchant's quay, Cork, this morning. The upper floors of two houses were gutted, and a garage with some of its stock and two cars were badly damaged. A plumbing establishment was burnt out. Damage was also caused at the rear of the premises occupied by O'Mahony Brothers, harness makers.

OBITUARY

MR. W. A. COCHRANE

The death of Mr. W. A. Cochrane, J.P., "Sunnyside," Windsor Park, Belfast, took place yesterday in the Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast, following an operation. Mr. Cochrane recently retired from the Belfast Corporation, on which he sat as Councillor for Windsor Ward.

Mr. Michael J. Scott, M.R.I.A.I., will give a lecture on "Irish Art," to be followed by a variety concert, at the Town Hall, Dun Laoghaire, this evening. The artists include Sir Valentine Grace, Miss Hughes, and "the Blind Fiddler of Bray Head," who will play Irish airs. There will be a collection for The MacEgan Memorial Fund and Irish Red Cross.

IRISH AND OTHER UNIONS

SMALLER BODIES TO BE CONSIDERED

IN the Senate yesterday, on the resumed debate on the Trade Union Bill, 1941 (Committee stage), the Minister for Industry and Commerce, Mr. SEAN MacENTEE, told Senator S Campbell that he would consider the case of small unions which were temporarily embarrassed financially and which would be able to pay the £1,000 deposit if given sufficient time. The Minister said that he might introduce an amendment in regard to these.

On the section dealing with registration of members of a union, and which gives power to the Minister to issue an authorisation to an approved person to inspect the register of members of a union, Mr. CAMPBELL thought that the Minister could easily delete this part of the bill.

The MINISTER said that only people with a bona fide right to inspect the registers would be given such authorisation. A union could see if its privileges were being violated by another union by an inspection of the register of the suspected union.

TRIBUNAL CHAIRMAN

Moving an amendment which would mean that a person with knowledge and experience of trade unions or of employers' organisations, or a person with experience in the settling of trade disputes, would be chairman of the Tribunal rather than a man with legal experience, Mr. J. G. DOUGLAS said that this was a case where legal experience was not a qualification.

Mr. MacENTEE said that he could conceive no one who is more in touch with everyday life than a barrister. They wanted someone who has not been in actual contact with trade unions.

IRISH UNIONS

Dr. T. J. O'CONNELL, moving an amendment to delete the provision that the Trade Union Tribunal might determine what trade unions have the sole right to organise workmen of any particular class, said there were 83,000 Irish workers in Irish unions and 79,000 Irish workers in other unions, and the latter were not any less patriotic than the former. Many of them had financial interests in their unions, and when workers had to cross to the other side the fact that they were members of a union which had its headquarters there made it easier for them to obtain work. The bill was a discrimination against them, and it should not be used as a means for coercing them to do something they were unwilling to do. The policy of breaking the connection with England might be carried too far. In the railway industry they had an instance of a breakaway union being formed, and this sub-section would give such unions a new lease of life.

Mr. MacENTEE asked the Senator not to press the amendment, and said that the tribunal was bound to give a decision as they considered proper in the public interest. Did any Senator think it was in the public interest to confer the sole right and privilege of organising the workers of this country in an organisation not registered under the law of this country and with headquarters not under this country's control? It would be unthinkable that any State should confer such a right on an outside organisation.

UNDER IRISH CONTROL

They might as well allow other political organisations from another State to reorganise their Government in their own peculiar form. If they were to give this sole right to organise workers, they ought to ensure that the right would be given to people who were wholly under their control.

Professor M. TIERNEY said that they were faced with the possibility of allowing foreign unions to have monopoly privileges. An Irish Parliament could not calmly accept that position, no matter how it would affect the people involved. They were not depriving foreign unions of established rights, but they were preventing them from getting new rights.

The House adjourned until Wednesday.

MR. HORE BELISHA'S HOLIDAY

VISIT TO DUBLIN AND KERRY

Mr. Leslie Hore Belisha, M.P., former Secretary of State for War and Minister of Transport in Great Britain, arrived in Dublin by air yesterday afternoon. He was accompanied by Colonel Arthur Evans, M.P. for Cardiff, and was met by Mr. Robert Briscoe, T.D., and driven to the Shelbourne Hotel, Dublin, where he will stay for a few days before going to the South of Ireland.

Shortly after his arrival at the Shelbourne Hotel Mr. Hore Belisha told an Irish Times reporter that his visit was purely personal. "This is the first time I have been to this country," he said. "I have come over for a holiday." He said that he had been much impressed by what he had seen on the drive to the city. What had caught his attention most was the streets—their broadness and the fine architecture of the buildings. He was, he said, looking forward to an enjoyable time in the South. How long he intended to stay he could not say that would depend on circumstances.

Asked if he intended to see any Ministers of the Government during his visit, Mr. Hore Belisha said that he would like very much to do so—particularly would he like to meet the Taoiseach. Mr Belisha and Colonel Evans expect to leave Dublin for Kerry on Saturday.

Mr. Rory Henderson, county director of the Irish Red Cross Society, visited Avoca yesterday, where a number of boys from the North Strand bombed area are at present spending a holiday under the supervision of the Boy Scouts. The boys expressed keen appreciation of the scenic beauty of the district and the care given to them by the Scouts.

NEW THRUST INTO UKRAINE

RUSSIANS EVACUATE TWO TOWNS

FIERCE battles raged throughout yesterday as the full might of German armies was launched once more against the Soviet along the whole front, from the White Sea to the Southern Ukraine.

Announcing this, the Red Army's midnight communiqué indicated a new thrust by the Panzer divisions trying to smash their way through Marshal Budyenny's troops to the Black Sea. Kirovgrad, about 95 miles due east of Uman and about 130 west of Dneproptroysk—the industrial heart of the Ukraine in the apex of the Lower Dnieper bulge—and Pervomaisk, on the River Bug, nearly 100 miles north-west of the grain port of Nikolaiev, have been evacuated.

Earlier German High Command claims that the naval base of Odessa was encircled, Nikolaiev outflanked from east and west, and that the defence of the Western Ukraine is approaching "complete collapse" were answered by a Moscow spokesman, who, indicating that the Russian front is unbroken, declared that the Soviet troops were not encircled.

On August 13 74 German aircraft were brought down in air combat and destroyed on aerodromes for the loss of 27 aircraft, and the communiqué adds that in the Baltic Sea a German submarine was sunk.

Shortly after Moscow had announced another lull, the German High Command last night issued the special communiqué claiming the encirclement of Odessa and threats to the port of Nikolaiev.

The communiqué, dated from Herr Hitler's Headquarters, stated:—

"Under pressure of the ceaseless pursuit by German, Rumanian and Hungarian and Italian formations advancing to the south between the Dnieper and the Dniester, the defence of the Western Ukraine by the Soviet Army is approaching the complete collapse.

"Odessa is encircled by Rumanian troops. Nikolaiev is outflanked from the west and the east by German and Hungarian formations. West of the Bug, strong enemy formations are approaching their annihilation."

Later the German High Command said that German mobile units, "in advancing down the lower course of the Dnieper, took the iron ore district of Krivoi-Rog.

This centre is about eighty miles north-east of Nikolaiev. The German announcement added that the Soviet Union "has thereby lost more than 61 per cent of its total iron production, and has sustained from a military and economic point of view a shattering blow of far-reaching importance."

NEW HEADQUARTERS

Rome Radio said earlier yesterday that Herr Hitler has moved his headquarters into the Ukraine.

A great battle, in which "immense German air and naval forces" are engaged, is raging in the Gulf of Odessa, said a Hungarian communiqué yesterday. It also says that "high-speed Hungarian columns" are actively taking part in the battle of Odessa, and that "the encirclement of Odessa is an accomplished fact."

The communiqué goes on to claim that, following the occupation of Nikolaieff, and, above all, of Kherson the situation in the Crimea is becoming desperate.

"Information reaching Hungarian G.H.Q. to-day suggests that the Soviet Command has already begun to evacuate the towns of Simferopolis and Sebastopol, trying to save the war material in these two naval bases," it was added.

Moscow's communiqué yesterday, for the third time in the past forty-eight hours, stated that during the night "nothing of importance occurred on the front," after earlier reporting renewed fighting at Kexholm (on the Finnish front), in the Smolensk and Byelaya Tserkov sectors, as well as in a new zone—Staraya Russa, south of Lake Ilmen, on the Leningrad front.

In London it was learned authoritatively that one of the next German military aims in the Russia campaign may be the cutting of the Leningrad-Moscow railway.

A significant pointer to this is the first mention in the Soviet communiqués of Staraya Russa, which is 140 miles south of Leningrad, and stands on a branch line of the railway. It is the nearest point to the railway which the Germans have yet reached.

"NOTHING VITAL LOST"

From Moscow, Alexander Werth, Reuter's Special Correspondent, says that the thrust in the marshy territory here is clearly not aimed at Leningrad itself. In the Ukraine, he says, it cannot be denied that the armies of Marshal Budyenny are passing through the difficult period anticipated by Moscow, but "nothing vital has been lost."

"The fighting powers of the Soviet Armies," he says, "are still unimpaired. They are preparing for a long winter campaign."

The Germans claimed earlier that German and Rumanian troops had reached the Black Sea coast between Odessa and the Bug Estuary.

Meanwhile, other reports indicate that strong Soviet forces are in Odessa, a remarkably strongly fortified obstacle lying in the way of a continued advance to the Crimea.

Swedish correspondents in Berlin state that the Russian troops in the Odessa and Otsjakov—about 40 miles to the east—areas are preparing to evacuate by sea to the Crimea and the Caucasus. Claims reproduced in these reports include statements that crossings over the River Dnieper are being systematically destroyed from the air.

German troops, it is stated, are being drafted southward from the Smolensk region, the main energies of the Germans now being directed in the south in the hope of securing valuable resources, including, eventually, Caucasian oil.

NORTHERN BATTLES

The German News Agency, however, speaks also of a "series of violent battles" in the northern sector of the front. It is claimed that there were heavy casualties among the Soviet troops, and that they lost 26 tanks. Thirty-seven Soviet 'planes are said to have been brought down on Tuesday.

A Finnish communiqué yesterday claimed the encirclement of Soviet troops on the north-west shore of Lake Ladoga, the Russians fighting fiercely and trying—it was said—to withdraw across the lake.

Several direct hits on warehouses and oil tanks in a bombing attack on Murmansk on Wednesday, were claimed by the German News Agency last night.

RUSSIAN CLAIMS

The Red Army reported yesterday that the 39th German Tank Corps, eleven other divisions and thirteen regiments had been routed on the western and south-western sectors of the front, and that the situation had again become stable and quiet, says A.P. from Moscow.

The Red Star estimated that 21 other German divisions had suffered over 50 per cent. losses. It added that the list did not include "many divisions destroyed in the northern and north-western Bessarabian directions."

The old town section and centre of Riga has been completely destroyed, according to a Swiss Correspondent who has visited the Latvian capital. The correspondent says that the Russians systematically sprayed the buildings with petrol and set fire to them before withdrawing.

Mr. Harold Ickes, U.S. Defence Petroleum Co-ordinator, announced yesterday that the first shipment of aviation petrol for Soviet Russia in an American tanker is leaving Los Angeles for Vladivostok under the U.S. flag. Mr. Ickes added that "other tankers will leave shortly."

PROHIBITION ORDERS EVADED

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELLEEK, Thursday.

John Kennedy, Glen West, Garrison, was fined £25 at Belleek Petty Sessions for illegally importing fourteen cattle.

John McCann Corry, was fined a similar amount for dealing in white bread with intent to evade prohibition, and with being the importer of the bread from Northern Ireland to Eire.

Patrick Tracey, Mulinagrow, Garrison, who was summoned for exporting flour from Northern Ireland to Eire by an unapproved route with intent to evade prohibition, was fined £35.

"SOVIET DESIGNS ON TURKEY"

GERMAN COMMENT ON ANGLO-SOVIET NOTE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Thursday.

Commenting on the Anglo-Soviet declaration to Turkey, the Wilhelmstrasse, in a semi-official statement, asserts: "Official quarters possess concrete and conclusive material—from utterances by no less an authority than Molotoff himself when he was last in Berlin—which prove beyond doubt the Soviet designs on Turkish territory."

The statement also asserts that "the designs of the Soviet Union with regard to certain districts of Turkey were, and are to-day, an integral part of the expansionist foreign policy of the Kremlin. When Great Britain partners a declaration of the kind made in Ankara yesterday it is regarded by German quarters as having no serious significance, but is considered more as a tactical manœuvre."

The text of the declarations by the British and Soviet Ambassadors in connection with the Anglo-Soviet pledge to Turkey was issued in Ankara on Wednesday night.

Ankara radio, says Associated Press, to-night quoted the semi-official newspaper Ulus, which pointed out that the assurance of aid in the Soviet Note went beyond the Russo-Turkish Treaty and that Turkey did not need guarantees of aid.

COMMUNIST RIOTS IN PARIS

POLICE FIRE ON CROWD

ASSOCIATED PRESS.

VICHY, Thursday.

Paris newspapers disclosed to-day that the police fired on demonstrators yesterday at the Porte St. Denis, wounding some of them, while eighteen others were arrested at St. Lazare Station. Reports said that the demonstrators were led by Communists and that the outbreak began in a workers' suburb.

The Paris Radio said to-night that death may be the penalty for engaging in Communist activities in occupied France. An order forbidding such activities was issued by the Commander of the occupation troops to-day. Failure to surrender Communist leaflets to the military authorities will entail a punishment of up to fifteen years' imprisonment with hard labour.

Bader, double D.S.O. and double D.F.C., Britain's 31-year-old legless fighter pilot, who was recently reported missing, is a prisoner of war in Germany, according to an official German News Agency announcement yesterday. Wing-Commander Bader jumped from his burning machine by parachute after being shot down by a German fighter over the Channel last Saturday, the Agency states.—(Reuter.)

COMMUNITY KITCHENS—VI.

THE PARISH IS A UNIT

Work of a Social Service Conference

BY AN "IRISH TIMES" SPECIAL COMMISSIONER.

IT is not possible to obtain statistics to show how many people die from starvation, but attendants on the sick poor have said that there were definite signs of starvation on some of the bodies which they were asked to prepare for interment last winter.

That anyone should die of starvation in a country which can provide itself with the essentials of life is a sorry reflection on the country as a whole, and particularly on the parish in which the death occurred. The parish is the natural unit next in size to the family, and, therefore, it is the appropriate unit to deal with the general problem of communal feeding in time of emergency—yet some parishes in Dublin have not formed councils to deal with this, or any other, problem. In the course of my inquiries I discovered people walking considerable distances to obtain meals from "penny dinner" kitchens, because there were no facilities in their own parishes.

From a two-room office in Cavendish row, Dublin, a new organisation—the Catholic Social Service Conference—is conducting its operations, which are based on the parish unit. The organisation came into existence in April of this year, and has a very extensive programme of social work, but we are only concerned with that part which deals with communal feeding, although all its plans are aimed at relieving persons on the poverty line.

KITCHENS TO COME

Under the presidency of Mr. Owen Cowley, who outlined its activities to me, the conference consists of representatives of some thirty different organisations. An appeal was launched, and, instead of worrying about getting a "long stocking," as soon as the money started to come in a proportion of it was diverted to assist the various communal feeding centres already in existence by the purchase and distribution of food to them. From conversations with the "Penny Dinner" people I know that this part of the work has been very valuable.

The conference plans to act through Parish Councils, too, but it is taking more direct action in some districts. In Crumlin, for example, a parish kitchen will be opened within the next five or six weeks; another will be opened in Henrietta street, Dublin, at about the same time, and plans are being prepared for a series of similar kitchens.

Mr. Ernest Cullen is looking after this side of the work, and he told me that each kitchen will cater for about 300 persons a day. They will be kitchens in the full sense of the word, no meals being served for consumption on the premises, and customers will be provided with gallon cans to take their meals home. The meal will consist of stew, potatoes, and other vegetables, and is expected to cost sixpence; it will be sold at 2d., the balance being made up from the conference funds and by gifts of vegetables. "We want the people to take the meal home with them, as we think this will be for the good of the family unit," said Mr. Cullen. The kitchens will be staffed with voluntary workers.

THE CITY PARISHES

The establishment of a centre in Crumlin will be interesting in view of the experience gained by the St. John Ambulance Brigade with a mobile soup kitchen in that area last winter. The kitchen was sent to the district daily, at the request of a member of the clergy, and during the first week there was a very brisk demand on its resources. In subsequent weeks the demand showed a steady decrease, which continued until the kitchen was withdrawn for the summer months. One theory advanced for this falling off in custom was the failure of the people to appreciate the nourishment-value of soup.

Contact with rural parishes, through Muintir na Tire, is planned by the conference to ensure direct supplies of food and fuel.

The fact that the conference has to establish parish kitchens itself, instead of acting as a clearing-house for funds and ideas, is in some ways a reflection on the public spirit in the parishes which have not established parish councils of their own. In Dublin there has been a slackness in this direction on the plea that the city will not be cut off from the Central Government in the event of an invasion—an indication of extremely simple faith in the powers of the authorities and of a mistaken impression that an emergency exists only when the guns are sounding or the bombs falling: an emergency exists in any parish when there is a danger of one person in that parish starving.

RATIONING OF KEROSENE.

The Minister for Supplies has made an Order entitled the Emergency Powers (Kerosene Rationing) (No. 2) Order, 1941, providing for the licensing of kerosene retailers and the registration of domestic users of kerosene.

The Order provides that on and from the 25th August, 1941, no person may sell kerosene by retail at any shop unless he holds a licence issued by the Minister for Supplies. Application for a licence must be made on Form K.D.1, copies of which will be obtainable at all Post Offices. As from the 1st September, 1941, no domestic user of kerosene may purchase kerosene for domestic or household purposes unless he is registered with a licensed retailer of kerosene. To effect registration a domestic user must apply in writing to his normal retailer. No form for the purpose is necessary. Licensed retailers are required under the Order to keep a record of the name and address of each registered kerosene customer accepted by them, together with a record of the quantity of kerosene sold to each such customer. A domestic user of kerosene may not purchase in any month a quantity of kerosene exceeding half a gallon. The deliveries to retailers are restricted, and in a particular case a retailer may not be in a position to supply each of his registered customers with so much as half a gallon a month. In such a case the retailer is expected to distribute his supplies as equitably as possible amongst all his registered customers. Only persons who are the occupiers of premises not equipped with gas or electricity may register as domestic users.

Copies of the Order will be on sale shortly.

Rendezvous at Sea

Dictators are masters of stagecraft, but on this occasion they have been outdone by the democratic leaders. The famous meeting between Signor Mussolini and Herr Hitler in a railway carriage was impressive, but Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt, holding rendezvous somewhere "at sea," capture the imagination even more strongly. It is nearly a fortnight since President Roosevelt's whereabouts began to excite the interest of the American Press, and, as the days passed, bringing no news of his yacht Potomac, all manner of questionings and rumours filled the air. The excitement communicated itself to this side of the Atlantic, where the Potomac—and her owner's mysterious silence—have been making "front-page news" all this week. Perhaps, the meeting was, in the words of the Columbia broadcasting system, the world's worst-kept secret; yet, though it must have taken place several days ago, it appears to have come as a complete surprise to Great Britain, where the first inkling of it was revealed in Mr. Attlee's broadcast of yesterday afternoon. The manner of the meeting, however, is less important than the matter. It would be idle to deny that the joint declaration of the two leaders, as reported alike by Mr. Attlee and from the White House, has aroused more speculation than it has been able to satisfy. Did Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt meet for no other purpose than to issue a joint statement of war aims? If so, what was the necessity for a secret meeting at sea, hundreds of miles from either Washington or London, with imposing staffs of diplomatists and high officers, in conditions of profound secrecy? Could not agreement have been reached upon such a statement by means of the ordinary channels of communication? Unfortunately, little material is provided for conjecture. The two statesmen were in conference for three days, and are understood to have discussed many things—including the supply of American arms to Great Britain. We are at liberty to assume that the state of the Pacific played as large a part in their conversation as the state of the Atlantic, and that talk passed between them which matters more to the immediate course of the war than the eight points of the published statement.

Nevertheless, the statement has enormous significance. In the first place, it is the first clear and categorical account of Great Britain's war aims—her counterblast to the "Axis" Powers' frequently published concept of a "new order" after the war. Mr. Churchill has been criticised more than once in his own country for an apparent reluctance to put his programme upon paper. The charge can be levied no longer against him. Speaking for England, he stands committed to a positive course of action; and henceforward nobody who fights on Great Britain's side can be ignorant of the objects for which he is fighting. In the second place, the statement, not less than the meeting itself, links the destinies of Great Britain and the United States more intimately than ever before. It is a long time, of course, since President Roosevelt first declared himself and his country in open sympathy with the British cause, announced their detestation of the totalitarian methods of life and war, and proclaimed their intention to lend all possible assistance to the democracies. His share in the joint statement, however, commits his country fundamentally. The United States now declares herself in full harmony of spirit with Great Britain, not merely so far as the course of this war is concerned, but afterwards. In effect, the two nations pledge themselves to common action after the war. They contemplate a common hegemony, under which all countries of an aggressive turn of mind will be disarmed, the freedom of the seas will be established, economic collaboration between the nations will be restored, and every people will have a right to choose its own form of government. The statement has been compared to President Wilson's celebrated "fourteen points," but it differs from them in, at least, one essential respect. It is not a personal statement of policy, or even a statement of one nation's policy, but the joint declaration of two powerful Allies. As such, it furnishes the democratic cause with just such a charter—though differing immensely in kind—as the programme for a new world order which has lent solidarity to the totalitarian "Axis."

Painting the Lily

It is said that something akin to panic has been caused by the threatened shortage of cosmetics. Women with reputations for considerable beauty are almost prostrate at the thought of appearing in public without what the comic papers would call their "war paint." It seems that their beauty would not be as great as is popularly supposed if they were without the plum, crimson, scarlet or vermilion grease with which to ornament their lips and trace the cupid's bow or gash that suits them best. Something of their strawberry and cream complexion would disappear if they had to give up astringents, cleansing lotions, creams of one sort or another, powder of a carefully chosen tint, and, finally, a dash of rouge. Their eyes would not sparkle with such compelling glamour if they were to sacrifice the mascara for their lashes, the shade for their lids, and the pencil for their brows. If it is true that there is to be a dearth of cosmetics in the future, life obviously is going to be rather dull for men who found some sort of consolation for the troubles of the times in the masterpieces of feminine art upon which they were free to look without charge. Life, too, will be a great deal duller for the masterpieces. Facial beauty unadorned may come into its own again. The healthy colouring of the rustic wench, the pale freshness of the school girl, and the tan of the sportswomen may be appraised at their proper value, and poor sophisticated society sink into the "ha'penny place." We have been looking at this approaching calamity from a man's point of view. There also is something to be said for the woman's. The wedding of art with nature to "emphasise the grace of her ladyship," as Gilbert puts it, has been common practice from the time of the Pharaohs, and probably before them. It is a weakness of the most primitive peoples as well as of the most advanced, and in a sense we should be thankful that the form of accentuation that Irish women give to their more striking attractions is a pleasant one, up to a point. Modern lips, despite the "kiss-proofness" that is alleged by some of the cosmeticians, are there to be looked at, like wax fruit in an ornamental dish. The cheek with the bloom and the texture of a peach must not be roughly used, or both bloom and texture might disappear. It is true that the mascara-ed, shaded and pencilled eye might wink, but what is the good of a wink that is surrounded by all sorts of taboos? A cheerful, natural face, even if without beauty, is a more practical proposition; and may be, of course, that beneath a great deal of the cosmetics which will be unobtainable in the future there exists much rare beauty of which the owners themselves are not aware.

A Regal Fish

About this time of the year one regularly sees anglers travel about the country laden with all the paraphernalia of their hobby, but not, as a general rule, with any breath-taking catch of fish. On the whole, although fresh-water fishermen have plenty of what they call "good sport," and approach the whole business from a more scientific attitude, fortune is less favourable to them than to sea fishermen; it is always the fresh-water angler who figures in the popular jokes, tells his stories about the "one that got away," and spends the latter half of his evenings in the "local" telling his brother anglers various tales of previous expeditions in the days when fishing was fishing. For this reason we read with surprise of an unusual fresh-water catch which was reported in all the British newspapers the other day. According to this report—and a newspaper report hardly can be passed over as a mere "fisherman's tale"—a sturgeon was caught in the River Severn, no less than nine and a half feet long, and weighing over 350lb. Although it is not the largest sturgeon caught in British waters—there was one landed in pre-war times over twelve feet long and weighing 48 stone, which later was sent to Germany on a truck specially constructed for the purpose—it is not by any means a small fish, and the man who is responsible for its capture will not need to exaggerate the size of his catch. He may, of course, have experienced a few difficult moments when the time came to explain to his wife, not that the fish had "got away," but that it had been sent away post-haste to the King in Buckingham Palace. The fish itself, by all accounts, must be a royal specimen, and, with caviare at its present high price, should prove to be a veritable gold mine. A 100-lb. sturgeon contains, it is said, enough material to make at least forty pounds of caviare, and the present price of caviare in London is something like 45s. a pound—at which figure the amount obtainable from the Severn sturgeon should be worth at least £300. The angler, or anglers, who are responsible for bringing this fish to land—even though he was stranded in shallow water when he was found—should be, indeed, proud of themselves. Izaak Walton himself never did any better.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

An Innocuous "Mine"

Here is a story which reaches me from a source that seems to vouch its veracity.

At a spot on the Atlantic seaboard, which I hesitate to name, a thriving trade proceeded in the spoils of war. Jetsam of varied descriptions was discovered and disposed of without let or hindrance until the Revenue Commissioner's minions arrived to interrupt the proceedings. Ou watch by day and night, their Argus eyes could not be escaped.

Then came a brain-wave. A three-legged pot—the kind which hangs over the turf fire—was secured and up-ended on the beach.

Military aid was invoked to render it harmless. Arriving the next day, the detonating—is that the right word?—experts decided on long-distance target practice.

Meanwhile, the Revenue men considered prudence the better part of valour, and those in the know had a few more precious hours of darkness in which to pursue their activities!

Britain, Russia and Iran

The strong representations now being made by Great Britain and Soviet Russia to the Iranian Government are by no means novel in diplomatic history.

Before the first world war of 1914-1918 Britain and Russia more than once exercised pressure, sometimes in alliance, sometimes as opponents, upon Persia, as Iran was then known to the West. Thirty years ago or so these two Powers actually agreed upon the division of Persia into "spheres of influence," and this division was one of the burning issues in the Persian revolution in the early years of this century.

Earlier still, a British military expedition to Persia was amongst England's now forgotten little wars.

This expedition was sent in 1856 as a punitive measure for incidents following alleged gross insults offered the British Minister at the Shah's Court. Ambassadorial dignity in those years was a touchy point with Governments and their representatives.

Britain broke off diplomatic relations and withdrew the Minister and his staff from Teheran. After some months of diplomatic skirmishing a Persian army retaliated by besieging and capturing Herat, "the key to India," in Afghanistan. A British force 6,000 strong then landed in Persia under Sir James Outram, and, after stubborn defence, captured strongholds at Rushan and Bushire.

Land and sea operations followed against Prince Khan Mirza, and by March, 1857, hostilities had been concluded in Britain's favour with preliminaries of peace negotiated at Paris.

Overcrowding?

The phrase "overcrowding of the professions" is heard so often in this country that the following figures taken roughly from the newly-published fifth volume (Part 2) dealing with the 1936 Census of Population are not without interest:—

On the basis of a total population of 2,937,000 persons, there were in that year one barrister to every 8,394 persons (disregarding fractions, of course); one dentist to 6,325 persons; one journalist or author to every 4,300; one solicitor to 2,148 persons, and one teacher to every 490 persons.

In administration and religion, however, the odds are shorter. There were at that time 572 persons to every clergyman, and only 327 people to each member of the large army of 8,973 male "Civil Service officials and clerks."

That Expression!

A correspondent writes from Galway:—

Recently when you used the expression, "That Shook Yeh," in this column I wondered where Dublin had got it.

At the moment everything seems to be "shaking" your fellow-citizens up there. Not only has the expression being appearing in other Dublin newspapers of late, but on a recent visit to the capital I heard it used more often than the long-established "O.K."

Then when Dublin Opinion made it the theme of the principal cartoon of its last issue I knew that the expression had come to Dublin to stay, at least temporarily.

As a matter of fact, Dublin is merely copying Galway in this respect. From some time in March last "That Shook Yeh" might almost stamp you as a Galwegian. It originated, as far as I can gather, with a travelling revue company which paid us a visit here late in March, and round about Easter it was at the height of its popularity in everyday speech. Nowadays (thank heavens) it has all but disappeared, having gone, no doubt, to Dublin.

I am just wondering how long you people up there will enjoy our discard.

That Shook Yeh!

Soldiers' Girls

Somebody has said that the Irish soldier does not make a "hit" with Irish girls, although they were not adverse to "Tommy" when he was here.

I can't say if, generally speaking, this is true, but, at one outpost in County Dublin which I have occasion to pass twice daily, it is definitely very far from true. Never have I seen so many after so few!—I mean, of course, girls and soldiers respectively.

More than once have I seen a soldier attached to this outpost—off duty, needless to remark—literally surrounded with girls, and he in his shirt sleeves enjoying every bit of it.

Of course, the soldier is backed by a very official-looking notice, which screams: "Military Post. Halt When Challenged." Methinks, on these fine summer evenings, the girls need little "challenging."

Kemp in Great Form at Bray

The four seeded men—C. A. Kemp, J. McHale, R. F. Egan and A. E. Fannin—came through to the semi-final stage of the County Wicklow Championships at Bray yesterday, and they all won in straight sets. They will meet in that order to-day. In three instances the winners were given something to do by their opponents, the only one-sided victory being gained by Kemp, who was so deadly accurate that he never gave S. C. Robb any sort of a chance.

The best match was between Egan and P. Read, and the former gave one of his best displays this season. He was striking the ball decisively from start to finish, keeping an excellent length, and volleying infinitely better than his opponent. Results:—
